ABSTRACT

The family life education guide, part of a consumer and homemaking education unit, was developed in a 3-week curriculum workshop at Winthrop College in June 1972. The identified objectives and learning experiences have been developed with basic reference to developmental tasks, needs, interests, capacities, and prior learning experiences of students. The basic, grade 9 unit of 7 weeks considers self-understanding and acceptance, personal grooming, family relationships, family adjustments, extended relationships, and values and social concerns. The advanced, grade 10 unit of 4 weeks considers self-involvement, preparation for mature roles, and preparation for marriage. The semester course, for grades 10, 11, and 12, considers self-understanding, family living, the individual in the community, preparation for the future and for parenthood, children in the family, and decision making for family goals. Under each concept, three columns list behavioral objectives, learning and evaluation experiences, and teaching resources. (AG)

Acknowledgements

The guide for Family Life Education was developed in a three week curriculum workshop at Winthrop College in June, 1972.

Grateful appreciation is extended to the following persons who contributed to the development of the guide:

Mrs. Mattie Hanna, Hannah-Pamplico High School, Pamplico; Mrs. Estoria Jones, C. A. Johnson High School, Columbia; and Mrs. Dorothy Way, Orangeburg-Wilkinson High School, Orangeburg, who wrote the Family Life Education guide.

Dr. Twyla Shear, Professor of Home Economics Education, Pennsylvania State University, who gave leadership in the development of the guide and served as curriculum consultant for the workshop.

Dr. Richard Klemer, Chairman and Professor of Child Development and Family Relations, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, who served as consultant in family life education and reviewed the guide.

Dr. Helen Loftis, Professor of Home Economics Education, Winthrop College, who assisted with arrangements for the curriculum workshop and reviewed the guide.

Personnel of the State Department of Education, especially the Office of Vocational Education, who gave support and encouragement in the development of the guide.

The identified objectives and learning experiences have been developed with basic reference to developmental tasks, needs, interests, capacities, and prior learning experiences of students. The curriculum resource materials serve as the instructional program for all students and are a beginning point for the teacher in planning for the learning of students who may as a group not represent the norm, and who as individuals will reflect a range including both sides of the norm.

With a variety of students in a classroom, it seems imperative for the teacher to develop a plan for learning based upon a prior assessment of the performance status of students relative to the objectives specified. Pre-testing of students and cooperative planning, in relation to objectives and learning experiences are recommended for the homemaking teacher. Many group teaching-learning experiences may be necessary within the classroom but some learners will require individual objectives and learning experiences which may be provided for in numerous ways, including independent study, use of self-paced learning packages, programmed materials, paired-learner teams, and learning contracts.

As the teacher becomes skilled in providing for the individual learning needs of a few learners in each class, she can extend individualization to other learners in a given class. A basic part of the task is for learners to become increasingly independent and self-directive in their own learning which can be achieved only through experience. Both teachers and learners have to learn to function in their respective roles in the process, but the teacher is responsible in educating herself regarding the premises and strategies for individualizing instruction.

Since a basic principle of learning is to start where the learner is, the teacher can be viewed as a learner in seeking methods to individualize instruction. Prior experiences with clothing construction activities, home experiences, cooperative planning, and FHA activities can be analyzed as methods for meeting individual needs. A comparison of the analyses with guidelines from the literature on individualizing instruction may help to decide upon a first step. Taking one step at a time is much more feasible for both teacher and students than is a total immersion into a new change in behavior all at once.

Behavioral Objectives:

Educational objectives are specifications of behavior outcomes or post-instructional behavior sought as a result of teaching-learning experiences. Behaviors sought include a range of intellectual or cognitive behaviors, feeling or affective behaviors, and doing or psychomotor behaviors.

By definition, educational objectives must have two components: behavior, and content or context about which or within which the behavior is. When the objectives are made operational for the instruction of an individual learner or of a given group of learners by a given teacher, two other components may be added to give precision to an objective. The two additional components are the conditions in which the learning is to be demonstrated and standards of performance to be achieved.

Making an educational objective operational also calls for stating the behavior component in action terms or in verbal or non-verbal observable behavioral terms. For example, "Know sources of vitamin C" is made operational when it is specified as "List sources of vitamin C" or "State sources of vitamin C." The act of listing or stating is an observable evidence of knowing. Another condition of the educational objective is that it be stated in reference to the learner. It is understood that an objective which states "Determines the best buy among three different size boxes of X brand detergent" means that the learner is to determine the best buy.

The objectives in the following curriculum materials are written in behavioral terms but are not fully operational since conditions and performance standards are not specified. The overall or terminal objectives stated for the major concept areas are supported by selected enabling objectives. Teachers may make the enabling objectives fully operational by structuring the conditions in which the learning will be demonstrated and the criteria or standard for successful performance. For example, the objective column might read "Evaluate house plans." Since evaluation involves use of relevant criteria to a situation, the teacher must establish the situation or condition. A possible condition might be specified as "Given three house plans and a description of the Burton family and using the criteria established in class, . . ." The next step is to state the observable behavior. In this example, "select" seems appropriate. The objective in complete form may read:

Given three house plans and a description of the Burton family, select the best house plan for the Burtons using the criteria established in class. State the basis for choice relative to each criterion.

Success in this example is the performance of the task as specified.

Learning Experiences:

A learning experience is the activity engaged in by the learner to learn. Learning occurs only through experience and through reflection upon the experience. The selected learning experiences in these materials are written with this premise in mind. The teacher can look at the learning experiences and determine her role as facilitator of the students' experiencing so that they may learn. For instance, a learning experience reads "Analyze a supply of pictures of housing . . ." The teacher's task is to provide a supply of pictures that represents the range of qualities for which the pictures are to be analyzed.

Interest Approaches

An "interest approach" or motivational device is a teaching technique which serves to establish a classroom climate conducive to learning. The interest approach is a brief learning activity for a daily lesson which serves to introduce the topic of the lesson and establish a positive emotional climate. An interest approach is not the main learning experience and is not intended to teach a concept, but rather to set the stage for learning.

Knowledge of the multiple, diverse nature of adolescents indicates that a teacher cannot expect a student to come into the classroom from immediately prior activities and be mentally and emotionally prepared to participate in particular learning experiences. Students do not come into classrooms from a sterile vacuum but they come from homes, classrooms, libraries, and/or from other environments of intimate relationships. Their experiences run the gamut of positive to negative, compelling to repelling, or exciting to boring. It is the responsibility of the teacher to attempt to establish a common focus and a climate within the classroom to facilitate learning the objectives for the daily lesson.

The technique of the interest approach not only serves to provide a mutual climate of interest and thought for the classroom but the technique should elicit participation by all class members. A shy, reticent student often learns to participate in groups through an interest approach activity even though the student would not participate in a learning experience.

Examples of interest approaches are as follows:

1. Family Life Education: One Minute Role Play With Unfinished Ending.
 2. Home Furnishings: Work Simplification.
- Two Students. Teacher established setting.
First Student: "Elaine, I thought you and Bill went steady. Why is he sitting in the lunchroom with Jackie?"
Second Student: "He better NOT be! Wait until I see him! I'll . . ." Class completes sentence.
- Ask each student to slide to front of desk, slide to right side, to left side, and back to original position. Thank them for helping to use management principle and dust twenty (substitute class number) chairs quickly.

3. Consumer Education: Case Problem.

Secure a month's canceled checks of individual. Read to whom and amount for which check was written and for what purpose. Students describe persons who wrote check regarding sex, age, education, employment, marital status, etc.

4. Child Development: Toss Ball.
Students stand. Ask a question. Toss ball. Student who catches ball answers questions; student asks another question and tosses to another student to answer. Students are alert since it is not known to whom the ball is to be thrown. Good review since student must answer one question and ask another one.

Other suggestions which may apply to many content areas and may be adapted for use in a variety of methods are as follows: tasting parties, crossword puzzles, magic squares, word sentences, equipment tray, connect-the-dot pictures, poems, short stories, cartoons, ink dot identification, paper item construction, scavenger hunt, slides, dress costume, hat parade, altered Bingo games, altered Scrabble games, developmental collage, questions taped under chairs, price guessing, surprise box, mobile construction, spelling bee, maze, incomplete story, and problem-solving case study.

An interest approach is most likely to establish a classroom climate conducive to learning if . . .

- . . . it is of short duration.
- . . . it involves every class member.
- . . . it is a pleasant and interesting activity.
- . . . it introduces the topic of the daily lesson.
- . . . the teacher is enthusiastic and energetic about the idea.

Family Life Education
(Personal and Family Relationships)

Rationale

Education has the responsibility for helping individuals learn to function effectively as family members in an increasingly complex society. Individuals who understand themselves and others, establish a system of values, set goals, and evaluate progress toward attaining these goals tend to be happy, effective persons.

Technological, cultural, social, and economic changes have affected the traditional role of the family and created new patterns of living. Families face the problems of early marriage, young parenthood, three-generation families, physical mobility, changing roles of family members, and dual responsibilities of homemakers and wage earners. It is increasingly apparent that problems of delinquency, crime, sexual deviance, alcoholism, drug abuse, and mental disease may relate to the family.

When there is an awareness that all is not well, a challenge to bring about improvement is fundamental. Better families are the best insurance for a better society. Since the family is the basic unit of society, instruction in this area is essential.

The school has become the major instrument for improving society. Family life education has a unique contribution to make in the field of human relationships and the management of resources to achieve individual and family goals. This curriculum resource was developed as a tool for the teacher in helping learners to comprehend personal and family values, and interpersonal and managerial skills that contribute to responsible, informed behavior.

A unit in Personal and Family Relationships is planned as a part of the Basic and Advanced Consumer and Homemaking Education courses. A semester course is prepared for Family Life Education.

This curriculum, as developed, is intended to encourage the individual teacher to select learning objectives and experiences and adapt them to suit individual needs or group situations.

CONCEPTS: Self Understanding and Acceptance

OVERALL OBJECTIVES: Show understanding of the pervasiveness of basic human needs to the development of the individual's personality and character.

BEHAVIORAL OBJECTIVES

Describe ways in which persons meet basic human needs.

LEARNING AND EVALUATION EXPERIENCES

List the basic physical and emotional needs of an individual. Read references and compare reading with the basic needs you listed. Write the following physical and emotional needs on the overhead projector and through circular response, explain each need:

Physical

1. Food
2. Shelter
3. Sleep and rest
4. Adequate space
5. Activity

Emotional

1. Love
2. Acceptance
3. Appreciation
4. Security
5. Independence
6. Variety
7. Meaningful communication
8. Individuality

Differentiate among physical, emotional, social, and mental development in the individual.

Read reference to identify the areas of individual growth and discuss types of growth.

CONCEPTS: Self Understanding and Acceptance

OVERALL OBJECTIVES: Show understanding of the pervasiveness of basic human needs to the development of the individual's personality and character.

BEHAVIORAL OBJECTIVES

Relate personal traits to the basic needs for personality and character development.

Present short skits to show immature behavior in teenagers and analyze the behavior as it relates to meeting the basic needs of the individual.

Define personality. List personality traits that you admire in another person.

Identify your personality characteristics by using the personality check list in McDermott and Nicholas.

McDermott and Nicholas,
Homemaking for Teenagers,
6th ed., I, pp. 25-32.

Summarize the responses and analyze them as to strong and weak personality characteristics. Determine one of your best personality traits which makes you a unique individual.

Match the personality behaviors with the appropriate basic needs to see the relationship between personality and basic needs.

Compare the four terms: personality, personality characteristic, character and behavior. How do they relate?

View selected filmstrip on character development and discuss ideas and feelings about cheating. What basic need is being sought by the person who cheats?

Given several situations, make decisions and discuss the values and personality characteristics which influenced these decisions.

OVERALL OBJECTIVES: Demonstrate comprehension of the relationship between grooming and health practices and the appearance of the individual.

BEHAVIORAL OBJECTIVES

Suggest ways to enhance personal appearance.

Make a weekly schedule for good grooming, including those activities which should be done daily. Check good grooming practices on chart at beginning of each class period and evaluate your progress.

Develop a plan for improving three health habits in order to improve personal appearance.

Appraise the value of grooming aids and services in relation to personal health and appearance.

Work in small committees to arrange a display of grooming aids and state value to personal appearance.

Make a collection of newspaper and magazine advertisements for grooming aids and services. Discuss the statements given and determine whether factual or emotionalized.

1. One-parent family
2. Step-parent or parents
3. Three-generation family
4. Foster family
5. Two-parent family

Discuss the adjustments a family has to make when the mother is employed outside the home. From class discussion, summarize the suggestions for possible solutions in making adjustments.

Complete the following sentence: "When Mother works outside the home, the husband and children . . ." Analyze how values and goals influence the way the sentence is completed.

Describe some of the adjustments families have to make in relation to selected family crises.

LEARNING AND EVALUATION EXPERIENCES

Define the meaning of crisis. Participate in buzz groups to identify specific instances which may be regarded as family crises and analyze them for their effects on family members. Discuss how a crisis for one family may not be considered a crisis to another family.

Summarize the effects of crises upon family members and suggest ways of adjusting. Given a description of a family and a crisis, write a suggested solution to the problem. Discuss in class.

Identify sources of aid for families in a selected crises.

1. Death in the family
2. Family member with extended illness
3. Breadwinner unemployed for long period
4. Divorce

Investigate sources of aid in your community for families in crisis situations such as:

View filmstrip on family crises. Evaluate and react to the opinions voiced by teenagers in the filmstrip.

TEACHING RESOURCES

Filmstrip: Society for Visual Education, Inc., Family Problems of Older Teens Series: Broken Homes and Families.

Describe adjustments the family has to make to the addition of a new member.

Role play the preparation of the children in the family for both a new baby and the addition of an adult relative.

Discuss the adjustments necessary when any family member is added to the household.

EXTENDED Relationships

OVERALL OBJECTIVES: Show interpersonal behavioral characteristics which make one's behavior acceptable to others.

BEHAVIORAL OBJECTIVES

Identify characteristics that aid in developing friendships among peers and adults.

LEARNING AND EVALUATION EXPERIENCES

Participate in buzz groups to formulate meanings of friendship.

Identify dating behavior that is likely to enhance one's ability in interpersonal relations and dating behavior which is likely to detract from positive interpersonal relationships.

TEACHING RESOURCES

Identify characteristics that aid in developing friendships among peers and adults.	Participate in buzz groups to formulate meanings of friendship.	Write the word "friendship" on the chalkboard by arranging the letters in a vertical line. Beside each letter, write words which describe the kinds of friends one would like to have. For example, F--frank, friendly; R--reliable; I--interesting. Compare lists. Elaborate on these characteristics by indicating the behaviors one exhibits if he is so described. SELF-UNDERSTANDING

GENERAL OBJECTIVES: Show comprehension of individual uniqueness in inherent potential and the effect of environment.

CONCEPTS: Self Understanding

BEHAVIORAL OBJECTIVES

Describe the relationship between achievement of one's potential and the achievement of basic needs.

Indicate difficulty in attempting to bypass one step in the hierarchy.

LEARNING AND EVALUATION EXPERIENCES

After reading references, list individual basic needs. Arrange in order of importance.

Given Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs*, through class discussion or buzz session, show that this order is the result of the attempts to satisfy the developmental needs of man. State in own words the theory and cite examples as they relate to:

1. Personality and character development
2. Maturity
3. Building self esteem

* Abraham Maslow's theory of Human Motivation lists the human needs in the order of urgency of satisfaction as follows:

1. Physical needs (hunger, thirst, activity, sex, rest)
2. Safety needs (the search for a place which is relatively free from threats of life and which fosters a sense of security)
3. Belonging and love needs (desire for affection, accepting relationships with others)
4. Esteem needs (the desire to be respected by others for one's accomplishments and the quest for recognition and prestige)
